Def-i-ni-tion (def ə nish' en), n. 1. The condition of having fixed limits. 2. State of certainty, and having boundaries. 3. Clearly limited.

The pursuit of higher education through university life serves as a catalyst for mental, spiritual, and intellectual metamorphosis. During this delicate time of growth, many are compelled to define themselves and their existences. To give definition, however, is to place limits and set boundaries.

On the campus of Old Dominion, you will find a Student Body that is unconventional, a history that is unforgettable, and an athletic program that is unmerciful. Diverse and uncommon, the campus community should relish in the glory of having doubts and ambiguities. It is these uncertainties that afford our University endless possibilities and an existence that knows no limits.

The 2000 Laureate staff chose a theme which we feel best represents the campus and its students. As no single idea or phrase can adequately illustrate who and what we are, this book, like the students it represents, is undefined.

What facets make up an average college student's life? Good question. A better question would be what doesn't make up a student's life? Campus life at Old Dominion is equal parts of organization involvement, cultural activities, self expression, challenging academics, and basking in the opportunities of life. Our time as students on this unique campus is anything but average.

The experiences that our cultures have given us, along with those we have gained during our years here, have launched this institution to great heights. Unique and changing, we are each a piece of the puzzle that completes Old Dominion. As students, we find unparalleled avenues by which to convey our self-expression. As a campus, we are growing exponentially, most noticeably with the commencement of the University Expansion. As intellectuals, we continue to challenge conventional thought, holding true to our paramount purpose as collegiate scholars. As a community, we have proven our virtue with the wealth of talent, vibrance, and insight we possess. Though we are very real people with very real existences, what our Univeristy is, and where it is taking us is, by all conventional definitions, unreal.

The average college student is borderline penniless. Cash for leisurely spending is often impossible to come by. Truly desperate students get jobs, but most beg their parents for extra cash. The First Union ATM provides quick access to cash, no matter how small the withdrawal.

Entertainment costs money that often doesn't exist. Luckily, there is always something free to do. Attempting to win a prize at The Real Deal Game Show, Neleh Bacarse gave an incorrect answer, and received a crazy penalty.

Residence Halls have a strong tendency to be quite bare. Poverty-stricken residents always find ways to decorate their humble abodes. With free Magic Candle Art presented by SAC, students created a colorful trinket to put in their rooms.

Free, what an inexpensive word. Unfortunately, college is expensive. A major part of student life consists of digging into pockets often lined with lint. Our Student Body is certainly not immune to the financial strains of higher education. From winning twenty-dollars cash at a Crazy Game Show to TVs or plane tickets at Wacky Olympics, students find ways to supplement their monetary strains. You've heard of starving artists; our campus community abounds with starving students. If an organization or office wants participants at an event, they need only provide free food. As with the Student Senate's Pride Day, hundreds of people hungrily showed up to consume the surplus of Papa John's pizza, Surge soda, fresh popcorn, and snowcones. Within minutes, the food had been consumed, and the appetite-free students satisfyingly watched the day's festivities. Attending college and earning a degree present one asset to every scholar: a future paycheck.

What will you do for cash?

Wacky Olympics VII, sponsored by Auxiliary Services, gave students the opportunity to escape stress for a day. With no money to buy anything, students took advantage of every opportunity to win free prizes. Tariq Elyas and Assen Gueorquiev participate in the three legged race on Webb Lawn in the hopes of winning a 25 inch TV. The only expense may have been their humility.

Coloring one's hair is, by far, the least destructive form of body expression. It gives people, like Shayla Spencer an opportunity to manifest their creative side, without committing them to it for the any permanent length of time.

Piercings have become a common form of self-expression among college students. Almost any location on the human body has become a hot spot for a barbell, ring, or stud. Maggie Martin has piercings in her eyebrows, ears, and tongue. Tongue piercings take an average of one week to fully heal since the tongue is the fastest healing muscle. For some, self-mutilation is the only way to go.

"I went to a school where we couldn't express ourselves. I did it to rebel."
-Till Cipolone

"I did it just because it looked good."
-Kris Franklin

"I did it because males think it is attractive."
-Lindsey Germono

The form of self expression that is truest to the term "body art" is tattooing. Whether they are related to one's culture, or someone felt the need to be artistic, tattoos are the most famous type of statement in their class. Jeff Towers and his tattoos have been together for several years. The images he now wears, he actually designed as a small child.

One of the newest waves in the realm of body art is the sporting of temporary tattoos. Sergio Santos shows his school spirit on Student Senate's Pride Day with his facial tattoo. This art, however, carries no lasting scars.

The Expert Predictions

they know anyway?)*

The icecaps will melt from Antarctica and raise sea level by 7 feet, covering many coasts of the world. Norfolk will be gone. (Sorry.)

Luckily, the sun isn't exploding for another billion years. So, we are safe there...for a while.

In the confusion of the "real" date of the millennium, art thieves steal trillions from corporate bank accounts. Entrapment wasn't just a movie.

In an ironic, yet fascinating coincidence, all the volcanoes will explode at the same time. Simultaneously, all nuclear power plants meltdown. Break out your sunscreen. (SPF 15 or more only.)

The 7-11 Slurpee machines have their own meltdown causing major cherry spillage into the streets. This does not stop people from consuming it.

It's the end of the world as we know it. Well, maybe not yet, but 1999 is the end of the century...or is it? Sophomore Craig Palmer believes the millennium ends after 1999. "I'm celebrating this year. No one is really sure how people of the past figured out the end of the centuries." Palmer was countered by fellow Sophomore Mike Arendall. "People don't start counting on 0. The new millenium starts in 2001," argued Arendall. Nevertheless, the world is preparing for the infamous Y2K computer bug. "The only people who really need to worry are the large corporations," rationalized third year student, William Smith. "I went to a website to check my personal computer...just to be on the safe side." In response to the hype that has been placed on the

New Year, an extreme few in the campus community, and around the world, emptied bank accounts and stocked up on food. "Hey, you never know," adds Geoff

Runyon. Whatever the real end of the Twentieth Century is, people are still prepared for the year 2000 and whatever it may bring.

Walk of life

A mosaic of faces and religions fashion our campus community. When greeting a passerby, one may hear "Hola," "Shalom," "Salut," or "Hello." To meet the needs of our diverse institution, a wide variety of cultural activities are offered.

These activities range from Japanese Kendo and the Muslim praise of Allah, to those presented by the Hugo A. Owens African American Cultural Center, located on forty-ninth street. Adjacent to the African American office provides a venue for University students to learn about and greet other students interested in the Asian cultures. Religious praise can be heard throughout most of our University's centers. From Anglican to Muslim, religious faiths are shining brightly within our constellation of students. No matter what walk of life you are from, there are open arms for all at Old Dominion.

*what does

Our University is known both domestically and abroad as possessing an international atmosphere. Every culture, faith and belief is welcomed with open arms and minds. Everyone is encouraged to commune in their unique fashions. Muslim worshipers gather to pray while facing in the direction of their temple, Mecca.

norfolk hot spots

Our fine city is home to many decadent selections for dining. Depending on what your budget will allow, the choices range from fast food joints to the upscale cafes and taverns, such as Freemason Abbey, situated downtown. One of the newest additions to Norfolk's dining repertoire is the Rainforest Cafe. In this exotic setting, you may feast in the company of tropical fish or during one of the many animal shows.

If you're looking for a night on the town, without having to travel any further than across the street, the 4400 Club has been a constant source of convenient night life for ODU. There are two rooms to choose from with alternative types of dance music to cater to every taste.

A longtime campus favorite, Mi Hogar's authentic Mexican restaurant, has long been known for economic prices and delicious cuisine. This hot spot is located on the corner of Forty-third St. and Hampton Boulevard. Yes, that area will soon be home to the new Convocation Center, but fear not. Mi Hogar's will be relocating to the corner of Forty-second Street and Granby St. Ole!

Boasting three stories, and over one-hundred and fifty shops to choose from, MacArthur Center Mall is without a doubt the shining star of downtown Norfolk. The pinnacle event for the rejuvenated city was MacArthur's opening in the spring of 1999.

By far the most economical choice of mobility is to walk to and from class. For most students, this is also a wonderful way to keep in shape during the school year. Lina Adilah has made a healthy habit out of using her feet her primary mode of transportation. "Yes, sometimes my feet hurt, but new shoes are cheaper than a new car."

They travel on foot, by bike, and on skateboards. Who, you ask? Students trekking around campus, of course. There are infinite reasons why students choose to commute by means other than driving. "I don't have to pay for parking or gas. It's easy transportation," comments skateboarder, Ryan Jones. Aside from the obvious financial reasons, many choose alternative commuting for other reasons. "It's a great way to exercise, and I get to class on time," adds in-line skater, Brad Preliess.

Only the truest of dare-devils will tempt the fates by walking. Pedestrian, Bobby Mercer, claims, "I'd be a millionaire if I had a dime for every time I was nearly killed by a kamikaze biker." With the myriad of mobility options available, the testimonies support one common fact: "It doesn't matter What mode of transportation I use, I am always late."

Skateboards rank among the most entertaining forms of transportation. On any given day, you're likely to find several skateboarders performing stunts as recreation for themselves, and as entertainment for idle passerbys.

Bicycles are the most popular, and efficient, means of alternative commuting. Whether you are late to class, or just enjoying the Virginia weather, you can comfortably set a pace ranging from intense to quite relaxing. Jimmy Nguyen coasts along while contemplating life.

Maintaining the body is often linked with cleansing the mind and soul. Many athletes attribute low stress levels to high energy activities. Alberta Candada vents her frustrations through rigorous exercise to keep stress levels down.

Dancing combines the element of physical exertion with that of artistic expression. Pairing these two sources of stress relief presents an excellent way to rid the body of any additional strain. Dancers, like Rachel Richmond must concentrate on body position, movement, and balance while at the same time exerting artistic expression. "By the time I finish dancing, I'm too tired to be stressed."

Welcome to Roach Heaven...otherwise known as a Powhatan apartment. Between the stress of writing papers and taking midterms, housekeeping responsibilities are often forgotten. By the end of the semester, it is quite possible that some of these dishes may walk out alone.

Okay, no one ever said that the residence halls were comfortable, but come on. Believe it or not, some students, like Daniel Kertesz, prefer snoozing in strange places. "It's quiet, and people don't mess with you. They look, but they don't mess with you."

Ah, the ups and downs of communal living. Nothing illustrates this better than life in the residence halls.

"Adjusting to different personalities and learning how to get along with people is definitely one of the most important changes I have experienced since moving on campus," comments second-year transfer, Tenek Lewis.

There are many adaptations that must be made after choosing to live on campus.

Sophomore Chris Schriener found that he missed the companionship of his friends, but felt very fortunate to reside in Whitehurst Hall. No one will debate the fact that resident life acts as a catalyst for emotional

As the city of Norfolk begins to restore the splendor of yesteryear, ODU keeps with its tradition of being an integral part of the city by refacing one-hundred and seventy-five acres along Hampton Boulevard. The campus will obtain a much more refined look by adding the much anticipated University Village. "It's truly going to improve the University. It will be an asset to the city of Norfolk, and to the students of Old Dominion," boasts Megan Rapisardi. "I feel bad for the small business owners that

You don't need a newspaper to tell you that the roads are flooded. Hurricane Floyd caused some of the worst flooding Virginia had seen in years. Flooded streets, sewers, and sidewalks debilitated the area for close to a week.

Obviously, the roads were not the only areas that were affected by the torrential rains and horrendous amounts of flooding. Yards, walkways, parks, and cars were all subject to the wrath of Floyd. Here, two students find it necessary to remove their shoes while walking through knee-high water in front of Webb Lawn.

Woven throughout the present are the threads of the past. As has been proven time and time again, history is destined to repeat itself. By examining the history that has molded our University, we find a campus that was founded on pride, enthusiasm, perseverance, and dedication

Students stopped at nothing to fight for what they believed in. The University triumphed with the fanfare of pride and responsiveness from the campus community. It is a past that Old Dominion should cherish and promote with pride. Has our history forewarned us of the future that we know as reality? Upon retrospect, how will you perceive your years at Old Dominion? Will you be proud of your accomplishments? Will you hold your head high with thoughts of how you molded the future? Or will you wonder what might have been? Will you let your past be (un)known?

Streaking has always been a tradition on college campuses nationwide. During the 1971 school years, several students decided to challenge the administration by stripping naked and running around the campus.

1971- Vietnam is still in full swing and so were the protests from college students. Students like this were particularly upset with the May Day arrests in Washington D.C. May Day is known as a communist holiday. This student's form of voice was to dress as the Grim Reaper to emphasize that "America was dying."

After half a semester of non-stop work, ODU students will do anything to have a good time. When students come together with a common vision for entertainment, campus history is bound to take shape. Approximately one-hundred and fifty male students, from Roger's and Gresham Halls gathered together to wage a water war on one another. This war was the ending result of a dormitory panty-raid that had been launched several days beforehand.

Straying from the traditional themes of homecoming the student body chose "Save ODU" as their encouraging motif. Due to budget crises, many thought the school was dying. ODU was even coined as "Old Diminishing University." These students like many others were greeted with tons of "Save ODU" signs & bumper stickers during the homecoming parade to help increase funds. Obviously, the persistence & hard work paid off - The Monarchs did not die in 1970.

The threat of closing the University because of budget cuts caused a major uproar in the 1970 student body. The campaign was one of the biggest the community had ever seen with one goal in mind: To Save ODU. The outcry included protests and literature that was passed out as an appeal to keep the University in operation. Homecoming was specifically set up that year to save the University. "Tidewater's People Need Old Dominion University" They couldn't agree more.

Students from around the globe found a home at Old Dominion University. So rare is it to encounter an urban university containing such a close-knit community within. Here you will find the best of both worlds all rolled into one. We share a special sense of uniqueness, derived mostly from the unparalleled composition of backgrounds, cultures, and ages represented.

We hail from all fifty states and over one hundred countries around the world. Choosing to study in this multicultural, international environment offers us a true competitive edge over graduates from other universities. Our institution, and we as the people who create it, are extraordinary and unlike any in our class. We possess a respect for dignity and awareness, a broad capacity for scholarship and achievement, and a desire for higher knowledge and understanding. Our institution is old enough to value tradition, yet young enough to welcome change. We constantly challenge ourselves to think, to act, and to achieve. The astounding attributes we possess as individual students, and as a Student Body, constantly bring statewide and national recognition to Old Dominion. To those outside the campus community, the qualities and characteristics we possess and display are exciting, refreshing, and unfamiliar.

If you lead,

Dr. James V. Koch President of Old Dominion University

Since 1990, Old Dominion University has flourished under the presidential leadership of Dr. James V. Koch. In a recent national study, he was named one of the 100 most effective college presidents in the United States.

President Koch came to Old Dominion after having served as president of the University of Montana from 1986-1990. Throughout his career, he has also held faculty and administrative positions at Illinois State University, California State University at Los Angeles, the University of Grenoble (France), Ball State University, Brown University, and the University of Hawaii.

After ten years of service at Old Dominion, President Koch has guided the university to national recognition, and has helped us earn the title of "The University of the Twenty-first Century."

The campus community was deeply saddened to learn that President Koch will be retiring in the year 2001. He will be greatly missed, and we are forever indebted for all he has done for Old Dominion University.

One of the most enduring symbols of tradition found at Old Dominion is undoubtedly the Greek Rock. This historic emblem is nestled on the Kaufman Mall walkways between the Education building and Kaufman Hall. Presented in 1967, the monument was a gift to Old Dominion College from the Kappa Lambda Chapter of Theta Xi Fraternity. This commemorative symbol stands to provide an eternal reminder of what Greek life is all about. Like the organizations it represents, the Greek Rock is strong, determined, and proud. The strength and bonds of the united sororities and fraternities have, like the monument, withstood the tests of time and hardship. Through and through, it is by the virtues of brotherhood and sisterhood that Greek organizations continue to prosper and contribute to the University community.

The Zeta Pi chapter of Theta Chi fraternity has the prestige of being one of the oldest and most active fraternities at Old Dominion. Through the years, Theta Chi has received honors for having the highest Greek GPA, and for having contributed the highest number of hours towards a national philanthropy. This fall, the brothers actively participated in supporting events during National Sexual Assault Awareness Week in conjunction with the Women's Center and the Panhellenic Council. Exemplifying scholarship, perserverence, and community service, the brothers of Theta Chi continually uphold their commitment to being "The Fraternity of the Helping Hand".

United by the bonds of sincere and lasting friendship, the Theta Phi chapter of Delta Zeta sorority has been an active part of greek life at Old Dominion for over thirty years, lending its services to such philanthropic programs as the American Cancer Society Relay for Life, the SHARE program, and a myriad of additional community service projects. This year, the sisters also organized a very well received book drive to benefit the Carrolton Library in Franklin, Virginia. In addition to community contributions, the sorority focuses on fostering meaningful and lifelong sisterhood while creating virtuous, honest, and well-rounded ladies.

The chapter of Zeta Phi Beta Sorority, Incorporated has proven to the university community over and over again that through their determination, dedication, and accomplishments that sisters may reach new heights in scholarship, service, and sisterly love. The chapter has been extraordinarily dedicated at setting the example as the university's "Epitome of Finer Womanhood". Dedicating much of their efforts to service, the chapter has hosted numerous events in support of their philanthropy, the NAACP. In addition, Zeta Phi Beta held a voter registration drive to encourage campus involvement. The chapter also held a step show in the Webb Center South Mall. Without a doubt, the sisters of Zeta Phi Beta have been quite an asset to the Student Body this year. Their unwavering persistence to reviving Greek community has indeed impacted the campus and views towards Greek life.

-Roger Stewart

Invest, Invest, Invest..... then spend.

-Chasity Bullis

College students, knowing how difficult money is to come by, will jump at the opportunity for a million dollars. Just for fun, ask yourself, "What would I do for a million dollars?" Would you invest it? Donate some to charity? Or would you be like Brett Wentworth and buy a new car?

Is That Your Final Answer?

For the last time, Regis, Hell yes!

Buy a new horse and give some back to my parents.

When it comes to relationships, two individuals must learn when and when not to compromise certain issues. Many couples have problems dealing with each others' cleaning habits, while others have problems dealing with family and friends. Chris Belter, embracing Magnus, and Jacquie Payne, comforting Ginger, know about the bonds of love and dependency that develop between pets and their owners, so as not to compromise such an issue.

(un)restrained

Few will question the fact that there are several inherent benefits that come with living on campus. Most notably, you find hundreds of residents relishing the taste of freedom that comes with the first experience living away from home. It's also pretty nice to be within a stone's throw distance from classes, too.

But with all of the freedom, comes many hardships that residents are thrown into. For many, this is the first time sharing a room was an option. You learn to share everything from a bedroom to paper products. Years from now, you will look back at your college days and think "my roommate really wasn't that unusual." Or maybe you think back and say "I was a really selfish roommate." Either way, you will think back and realize your days were not that (un) restrained.

With all of the hard work and long hours put in by the RA's. There is also much tedious work to be done, such as cleaning up the mess that was left from yesterday's hard work.

ODU welcomes
visitor...

Whitehurst residents Graham Howard, Heather Weist, Joy Fama, AXD, and AXD enjoy the first snow storm in Norfolk since 1980. ODU resident students bundled up and ran outside at three o'clock in the morning when the snow began to fall in late January. School was closed at noon on a Tuesday and did not resume until Thursday.

FOOTBALL PICTURE COULD BE

ODU has done it once again. William & Mary didn't see the fighting Monarch pride coming. Here Jim Koch drove up the gut, jumped over- the left tackle, and dived right into the end zone. The Monarchs controlled the rest of the game from them on. Monarchs even managed to pull off the second game at home. Right on football team!

ODU was red hot in their homecoming game against Virginia Tech. Not only was the festivities the best ever but the team smoked the Hokies at 90-0. That was the best score of the season for the pride of ODU.

YOU AS A FAN COULD

ODU FOOTBALL IS UNDEFEATED

Honestly ODU could have football

Monarchs literally had their best season ever. Not only was the school undefeated but school spirit has never been higher. Every single one of the games at ODU were sold out. At Homecoming against Virginia Tech, fans had to be turned away because the stadium was filled to capacity. This was all before events even got going. Almost 2/3's of the school said they have been to at least one game. Way to go Pridestars.

Can you believe that ODU football almost didn't happen. Up until 2001 football didn't even exist at ODU.

Fortunately, the school held a referendum in the spring of 2000. The yea's were the majority over the nays. Thanks for your support ODU Monarchs.

YOUR QUOTE COULD BE HETE

"The team was completely awesome this year. I went to every game. I can honestly say that I am the biggest fan of ODU football."

Dana Burnett, star quarter back for the ODU Monarchs, is delivering once again one of his famous Hail Mary's to receiver ?/?????. Burnett will be going into the NFL Draft next season and is rumored to be a first draft pick. "I would love to go to Pittsburgh, Hi Mom!"

Colophon:

The 2000 edition of The Laureate, (Un)defined, was printed by Herff Jones Printing and Publishing Company, in Gettysburg, Pennsylvania with a press run of 400 books.

The book was printed of 100 pound bordeaux paper, trimmed to 9 x 12 inches. The prepress design was done on one Apple Power Macintosh 7500/100 series of computer using Adobe Pagemaker 6.5.

Body copy was 13pt. AGarmond, captions were 10pt. AGarmond. Other fonts were used.

Undergraduate photos were taken by Strawbridge Studios of Durham, North Carolina. Special thanks to them for cooperating with us and comming back after the hurricane.

Any quoted oppinions are not nessacarly the oppinions of faculty or Laureate staff. Due to deadlines some information was not able to be included in this publications. Permission is required from Old Dominion University Publications or The Laruete staff for reproduction of any part of this book.

Last Look

Ok, So we have finally reached the end of the book and the end of the year. Putting this book together took a lot of hard work and caused a lot of stress. We finished it though and we hope you enjoy flipping through and reading the final product. We are the yearbook. We photograph, write, design, market, edit everything for you and about you. Thank you ODU for this opportunity and we wish you all the best in the new millenium. Long live the Laureate and long live the Monarchs.
